Curriculum Corner

May 2008

Language Arts

The road to the Revolution has introduced us to a number of interesting individuals and events. The series of Jean Fritz books about the leaders of the Revolutionary War will be the focus of small group and individual reading activities. From King George III to John Hancock, the students will become "experts" on a character or two from this period. As a whole class, we read Hope's Revolutionary War Diary, another in the My America series.

Math

We finished our study of decimals and fractions and will move on to geometry. It will be challenging to see and learn about the geometric concepts in our daily lives.

In the coming weeks, we will review and extend a variety of previously covered topics. We will explore elapsed time, long division, perimeter, and area in many hands-on activities.

As always-practice facts and review the math lessons:

Social Studies

In Chapter 9, the battles of the Revolutionary War are fought on the fields and in the homes of the Patriots and Tories. From the Declaration of Independence to the Constitution and Bill of Rights, we are learning about the formation of the U.S. government.

Events

May 1: Field trip to Capitol
May 16: Lower School Attendance Recognition, Presidential Physical Fitness Awards, and Tiger Dads Chapel
May 22: Last day of school!
